Question 1

Who wins the Islam and JDM UFC fight

Alright, so the question is about who wins between Islam Makhachev and Justin Gaethje in a UFC fight. This is a pretty interesting matchup, honestly. From what I understand, Islam is the current lightweight champion, and he's got this incredible grappling game, really suffocating once he gets you down. He's also got some solid striking, but it's usually in service of setting up his takedowns or controlling the fight on the ground. He's on a pretty dominant streak, beating guys like Charles Oliveira and Alexander Volkanovski.

Now, looking at Gaethje, he's a completely different beast. "The Highlight" is known for his insane striking power and his relentless pressure. He's a brawler, but a very skilled one, with a really strong wrestling background that he uses to stuff takedowns and keep the fight standing where he wants it. His fights are almost always exciting because he's always looking for the finish, and he can definitely dish it out as well as he takes it. He's got wins over some big names too, like Tony Ferguson and Michael Chandler.

So, when you put them together, it's basically a classic striker versus grappler scenario, though both guys are well-rounded enough to surprise you. Islam's path to victory is pretty clear: get the fight to the ground, control Gaethje, and look for a submission or just wear him down. Gaethje's path is to keep it standing, use his powerful kicks and punches, and try to land something big that Islam can't recover from. It's going to be a tough fight for both, and honestly, Gaethje's power is always a factor that can change things in an instant.

Ultimately, if Islam can implement his game plan and avoid Gaethje's heavy hands, he's got a really good shot at winning by decision or even a late submission. But if Gaethje can keep the fight standing and land clean shots, he absolutely has the power to knock Islam out. It really depends on who can dictate the pace and control where the fight takes place. It's a really tough one to call, but I'd lean slightly towards Islam's championship experience and grappling dominance if he can get it to the mat.
